

ANALYTICAL TABLE OF CONTENTS.

PART I.

ELEMENTARY NOTIONS OF CIVIL LAW.

LECTURE I.

	PAGE
INTRODUCTORY—THE STUDY OF LAW IN RELATION TO FOREST EDUCATION	1—10

Forests regarded as estates—how this separation of estates comes about—Forest officers as managers need to know something about the rights and obligations which arise from the legal existence of the estate, i.e. of the relation of the "owner" to the forest itself, and to other persons who are right-holders, and to contractors and employes and the public—The basis of law and what it is concerned with—"Persons" related to "Things."—"Persons" related in a variety of ways to other "Persons." From this variety arise several branches or departments of law—Constitutional law—Public law—Private (Civil) law—Private law deals with various kinds of individual relations—rights by birth and from status—from family connection—from transactions, events, and voluntary acts.

How we are to proceed in our study, in order to make it as limited and as useful as possible:—

Conspicuous of Scheme (Part I.)	13
--	----

Explained—It gives us the preliminary information we need, about Rights and obligations in general—About Persons and about Things.

Conspicuous of Scheme (Part II.)	16
---	----

Explained—It follows a convenient classification of rights—We only deal with some of the rights.

LECTURE II.

OF RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS; OF "THINGS" AND OF "PERSONS" IN GENERAL	17—37
--	-------

Legal right, what it means. How rights are recognized by law
Remarks on the kinds of laws (Statutes or Acts—Common-law)

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Custom)—Rules made under authority of Acts—Rules made by executive authority, their validity.—How rights arise out of voluntary dealings, and out of events—Difference between "act" and "event"—Legal act and its requisites—Effect of events, and lapse of time—The protection of rights and enforcement of obligations—Preventive action; injunction; specific performance ordered; remedial action—Right to bring a suit or action at law—Damages—Suits against Government, or public officers.
General ideas about Persons—Natural persons may be normal or abnormal—Artificial, moral, or juristic, persons; Corporations, how distinct from mere joint owners, &c.
General ideas about Things—Corporal and incorporeal; moveable and immoveable, &c.

LECTURE III.

PRINCIPLES OF THE LAW OF PERSONS AND THINGS (PRIVATE CIVIL LAW) ^A	38—48
--	-------

(A) The parties concerned—Person conditionally concerned—Responsibility for servants' act—Change of parties by assignment, death, &c. (B) The substance or content of the right—In case it is to do something or have something; in case it is an abstinence from something. (C) How the right arises. I. CONTRACT. Essentials of a valid contract—Proposal—Acceptance—Acting by agent: impossibility of thing agreed on; when it is immoral or illegal—Consideration—General list of forms of contract.

LECTURE IV.

PRINCIPLES OF THE LAW OF PERSONS AND THINGS (PRIVATE CIVIL LAW) (continued)	49—56
--	-------

Obligations may arise out of events, &c., where there is no contract—II. Obligations out of TORT (or Civil wrong)—How the obligation is operative; performance in a certain way, time, &c. How the obligation ceases—When completely performed—tender—effect of new agreement or alteration—'Condition subsequent'; set-off; release; non-performance—Thing becoming impossible—Operation of law—Lapse of time.

LECTURE V.

RIGHTS OF PERSONS IN AND OVER THINGS	57—76
--	-------

(A) Possession; its legal nature and forms; what things are capable of it; its loss. (B) Ownership and Property.—How acquired.

Prescription—Accession—Rights of chase and fishery—Transfer— Nature and features of ownership; Restrictions on ownership for the public good.	PAGE 84
---	------------

LECTURE VI.

RIGHTS OF PERSONS IN AND OVER THINGS (continued).

(C) RIGHTS BELONGING TO ONE PARTY EXISTING OVER THE PROPERTY OF ANOTHER	77—88
--	-------

General nature of such rights—Long leases; Mortgage; Pledge or pawn; Pre-emption. Rights of user; easements; servitudes. Use of term 'easement' in England and in India; easements of necessity—'Servient' estate—Real and Personal easements—the 'Dominant' estate—"Appendant" and "Appurtenant"—Forest rights not always 'real' in India—Easements are incorporeal Things;—discontinuous easements; effect of 'intermission' and of allowing an 'interruption';—no easement to do an unlawful or mischievous thing;—must be of some benefit;—not temporary but permanent;—(continuing and continuous distinguished);—Indivisible—Origin of easements—Loss or extinction.

PART II.

CRIMINAL LAW.

Conspectus of Substantive Criminal Law	89
---	----

LECTURE VII.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE LAW OF CRIMES	91—107
---	--------

The Indian Penal Code*referred to as a standard—General, special, and local law—Definition of terms—Acts (and omissions) which constitute offences. General exceptions (which take acts out of the category of offences)—Acts authorized or required by law; accident and misfortune; acts by child, lunatic, &c.; not done with consent; acts for benefit of person; act in emergency to save life or prevent greater harm; acts under compulsion—acts of very minute or petty character—act in defence of self (or another person), of one's person and property.

LECTURE VIII.

THE CLASSIFICATION AND DESCRIPTION OF OFFENCES	108—117
Against the State—Against Public Justice and the authority of Public Servants; and by Public Servants against their duty—Affecting the Human Body;—Murder;—Culpable homicide—Other offences—Hurt; simple and grievous—Assault—Criminal force.

LECTURE IX.

THE CLASSIFICATION AND DESCRIPTION OF OFFENCES (continued)	118—125
Offences against Property; theft; robbery; extortion; aggravated forms; "dacoity"; criminal misappropriation; criminal breach of trust; receiving stolen property—Mischief—Criminal Trespass—Offences relating to documents, and to Property and Trade Marks—Criminal breach of Contract—Defamation—Insult and intimidation.

LECTURE X.

ABETMENT—ATTEMPTS—LEGAL PUNISHMENT. CONCLUSION	126—137
Abetment in general; what constitutes—Special cases; difference in intention or in the result produced.—Attempts to commit offences how dealt with. Not applicable to Forest, or other Special Law offences—Punishment; death, &c.; imprisonment; fine; whipping—Some special incidents of punishment; second conviction—Limit of time for prosecution—Concluding remarks on prosecutions.
(Conspectus of Criminal Procedure Law)	188

LECTURE XI.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE LAW	140—157
Introductory remarks—terms used—Constitution and Powers of Criminal Courts—Justices of the Peace—Why are there grades of Courts and powers?—Judicial and executive powers.—Competence as regards extent of sentence—Executive powers—General rules;—aid to Magistrate—Arrest and its incidents—Arrest without warrant by police; by any person. Classification of cases; bailable and non-bailable, cognizable and non-cognizable; "Warrant case"; "Summons case"—Execution of warrants and service of summons—Search warrant.

LECTURE XII.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (continued) 158—171

The Prevention of offences—investigation by the Police—Trials; in what place held.—How they are set in motion—Police cases—Complaint to Magistrate—Formal enquiry for committal to High Court or Sessions—The “charge”—Formal trial by Magistrate himself (Warrant case)—Trial of “Summons case”—Summary trial—Incidents of trials—Queen’s evidence—defence of prisoner by pleader—examination of accused persons—withdrawing complaint or compounding cases—The form of recording evidence. The judgment.

LECTURE XIII.

CRIMINAL PROCEDURE (concluded) 172—182

The procedure of execution of sentence—second trial on the same facts when allowed—Appeal—the Appellate Courts—powers—Revision; by Sessions Court or District Magistrate—by the High Court—Special Proceedings—Trial of European British subjects—other cases—The Public Prosecutor—Evidence by commission—Orders about property at trial—Effect of Irregularity in trials. Miscellaneous Provisions.

PART III.

THE FOREST LAW.

LECTURE XIV.

GENERAL OBSERVATIONS ON FOREST LAW 188—201

Why is there a special law for Forests?—Present state of Forest Law; in England; the Colonies. Indian Forest Law; its history; list of Acts and Regulations—Provision of details by “Rules” having the force of law—their subject—must not include matters of executive, order, or practice; meaning of “Local Government”—The topics of Forest Law; five main heads or subjects stated—Preliminary matters; attempts to define the term “forest” for legal purposes—definition of other terms.

LECTURE XV.

ON PUBLIC OR "GOVERNMENT" PROPERTY 202—224

In general—In India—Main heads of property—(1) That held in virtue of Ancient State rights—Law of escheat—Forfeiture by Act of State—for crime—Claim to land as security for the assessed Land-revenue—Houses, lands, &c., the property of past rulers, as such—"Royal trees"—Property in alluvial islands—by accession—Law of alluvion and diluvion alluded to—State right to minerals—Right to all Waste Land, not expressly included in holdings and estates; historical retrospect of right in land (in India); the right to waste, long neglected—at length formally declared and acted on—Disposal of waste in making Land-Revenue-Settlements—Places where waste still remained—"Bakh" land—"District forest;" Madras and Bombay—(2) Public property in roads, canals, &c.—(3) Law for the acquisition of Land for Public Purposes.

LECTURE XVI.

LEGAL CLASSES OF FOREST—LANDS MADE SUBJECT TO THE FOREST LAW 225—244

Variety resulting from the condition of the available waste after long neglect—Legal position actually existing—Sec. 3 of the Ind. Forest Act and corresponding declaration in other Acts—Classes of Forests enumerated; in India; under the Burma Act; under the Madras Act—"Reserved Forest" and "Protected Forest"—history of the distinction; original intention of the framers of the draft Act with reference to the impossibility of taking in hand all available forest or "jungle" lands; these views not accepted—modified provisions resulting in a distinct class of Forests—these not properly or permanently secured—Argument that they can be sufficiently so, examined—Cases where "Protected Forest" may be satisfactory—Village Forests—difference between India and Burma Acts. Policy of Madras against Village Forests explained—The Ajmer Regulation—The Hazara Hills Regulation—Forests in which Government has only a share, or some other limited rights—Care of "Royal trees"—Control over Private forests or waste land.

Appendix A. (Giving an abstract of the chief European laws for the control of Forests belonging to Institutions, Corporate bodies, Communes, &c.) 245—248

Appendix B. (Giving a similar abstract of the European laws for the preservation of Forests (Public and Private) in mountainous countries, or where the forests have a protective character against torrents, floods, erosion of soil, &c. &c.) 248—250

LECTURE XVII

THE LEGAL STEPS IN CONSTITUTION OF FOREST ESTATES 260—278

Regular Procedure under Chap. II. 'Reserved Forests'—Notification of intention—Intermediate steps to maintain the status quo—Proclamation inviting claims to rights—Efforts also to find out such claims—In the end, claims not discovered formally abate—What sort of claims arise—to land, or plots in the forest; to rights of way, &c. (not involving produce); to rights of grazing, woodcutting, and other produce—to practise shifting cultivation—The last named not being a right is reserved for later consideration. Claims to land—How dealt with; their nature and origin; means of disposal. Claims to rights—Must be taken down and decided on, whether they are to be admitted or not; if admitted, their nature and extent to be defined and recorded. Produce rights, how they are dealt with; by transfer to some other locality—by admission to the Forest when constituted, subject to conditions—by commutation or process of buying out. Remarks on the transfer of easements and on the legal position of the locality to which they are transferred—Under what circumstances easements are retained in the Forest—Details about the mode of definition of easements claimed indefinitely, and about the regulation to which they are subject on admission to the Forest and about buying out or compensation reserved for separate Lectures—Those steps involve a hearing of the case and argument; Procedure provided: Person to represent the Forest interest. Appeal from orders—Subsequent (double) power of Local Governments to modify—Sec. 22, prohibiting any new rights growing up—Caution about infringing this rule by form of order acknowledging rights—Power of Government to grant new rights; not advisable to exercise; better to substitute revocable concession or licence—French law (of tolérance) useful on this subject. Final notification of the Forest—Publication of translated notice—Final establishment of boundary marks—reserved for future consideration (Protection of Forests by law)—Forest once "Reserved" cannot be disforested without express sanction—Rights do not revive in lands disforested—Remarks on form of Registering rights for future easy reference. Constitution of Protected Forest—The steps requisite—Constitution of Village Forest—Action in special cases—Private Forest, &c.

LECTURE XVIII.

(INTRODUCTORY TO THE SUBJECT OF DEFINITION AND REGULATION OF EASEMENTS); THE NATURE OF FOREST EASEMENTS; AND THE RELATIONS BETWEEN THE FOREST OWNER AND THE EASEMENT HOLDER 279—301

The legal basis on which Forest rights stand in India.

in waste and forest for which no one cared—State of the case under Native rule—Object of the Act to provide for equitable adjustment. The special features of Forest Easements.—Details that could not have been given in Lect. VI.—They do not make the holder in any sense a co-owner of the estate—Proudhon and the Revolutionary Law in France—Code of 1827—Right always a limited one, as existing without defeating the owner's right and enjoyment—Salvo re substantia; meaning of the phrase discussed. Limitation may be equally (in the end) beneficial to the easement. The right-holder, what he is entitled to. Object or sphere of the right—Generally claimed in vague form—Cannot be unlimited—Extent determined by actual need of the Right-holder for his own (or family) use according to his normal occupation, and the normal working of his farm, &c.—Easements cannot be separated from person or estate; nor the produce of it sold.

The Right-holder's duty as regards the Forest—"sparing" the forest—can have his right only so far as the Forest is able to supply it—Difficulty arising when the aggregate of a number of rights overtaxes the forest resources—The Forest-owner, what he is entitled to—His right to manage and work the forest normally—Conversion of forest—Case of restoration of ill-used forest—Right of owner to share produce with the easement-holder—case (in India) where it may be important—Summary of right—Includes the carrying out of a regular 'working scheme.' Duty of the Forest-owner—Must give reasonable facilities for exercise of easements—Must not manage badly or wastefully.

Appendix. European authorities as to limitation of rights 302

LECTURE XIX.

THE DEFINITION, REGULATION AND BUYING OUT OF FOREST EASEMENTS.

(I.) DEFINITION 307—320

General reflections—Remarks on drafting laws for India—Various details not mentioned in the Forest Acts—How the want may be supplied—Defects of Forest Settlements—Value of Appendix A. (at the end of these Lectures)—should be studied—Importance of Forest-easements; advantage and disadvantage of Indian law and conditions generally as to their settlement, valuation, &c.—Why definition is specially needed—Right of way—Water-course—Use of water—Definition of Produce-easements—Use of term "easement" not made by the Acts (note)—List of Produce-easements—Difference between definition and regulation—Provisions of the Act as to definition—Question of the right to sell produce—Preliminaries to definition—There may be a written grant or order—How to be interpreted—Easements need not be absolutely gratuitous—Growth of new rights—Provision for a fully developed farm or other business. PAGE

LECTURE XX.

THE DEFINITION, REGULATION, AND BUYING OUT OF FOREST EASEMENTS (continued).

DEFINITION of the several produce rights 327—343

(A) Wood rights—(1) For building and repairs—Form of building—Quantity of wood—Caution about increased size, &c., of buildings—(2) For industry and agricultural implements—(3) For fuel—Dead wood—(4) For conversion or production of some substance, by calcining, boiling, or distilling—(B) Pasture rights—Number of cattle how fixed—Not for whole villages as they may be in future, but at the time—Local claims and those of travelling graziers—Himalayan flocks and herds—Kind of cattle. (C) Right to grass-cutting—As a compromise for grazing right. (D) and (E) Rights of litter and lopping trees—Remarks on Streuuntzung in Germany; and in India—“Rāb” in Bombay—Definition how effected. (F) Rights to minor (accessory) produce. (G) Hunting and fishing—(H) The practice of shifting cultivation (on Forest slopes)—Gives no right in the soil—And none to an easement of any kind—Practice described—Reflections—Necessity of the practice locally—Efforts to stop it—Mistaken sympathy—Cases where an equitable right to the soil may be possible.

LECTURE XXI.

THE DEFINITION, REGULATION, AND BUYING OUT OF FOREST EASEMENTS (continued)

(II) REGULATION 344—366

Legal requirements—Important provision allowing Rules to be made—this in time will obviate the deficiencies of the Acts. (A) Wood rights—(1) For building and repairs—Use of indents or applications—Wood taken in advance—Destruction of building by fire, &c. (2) For industry and agricultural implements—Large pieces for canoes, mills, &c. (3) For fuel—Mode of getting—Torches and splints from stumps and ill-grown conifers—For kilns and boiling outah, &c.—(B) Pasture rights. Subjects to be considered—(1) Exclusion of dangerous animals—Elephants—Camels—Goats—European laws on the subject—Possibility of dealing with the question under Indian law—Sheep—Buffaloes—(2) Knowledge of the grazing capacity of different soils and kinds of Forest—Steps that may be taken—(3) Closing portions of the Forest for reproduction, &c.—Forest in an abnormal condition—Use of grass-cutting as a substitute in such cases—Compartments opened and closed—European law as to age, height of trees, proportion of area closed, &c. (4) Other protective regulations—Season of grazing where not settled by the definition—Grass not to be out first—Responsible herdsman—Cattle bells—Marks indicating closed portions of Forest—Fencing—Erecting of huts and sheds—Grazing by night. (C) Grass cutting—Its dangers—Height of trees. (D) and (E) Lopping—Litter-rights—Age of lopping—Height up the stem—Size of boughs to be removed—“Rab” cutting in Bombay—Plantation of belts for lopping—Ground litter—Principles of regulation—Plans for working the right—Open and closed compartments—Season—Time of leaf-fall—Mode of collection—Rules as to implements, &c. (F) Collection of minor produce—Usually no difficulty—Remarks about tapping for rosin, wood-oil, rubber, &c. (G) Hunting and fishing—To protect the forest—To protect the game itself—Conclusion—Arrangement of working schemes expressly so as to provide for easements—Importance of the subject.

LECTURE XXII.

THE DEFINITION, REGULATION AND BUYING OUT OF FOREST EASEMENTS (concluded).

(III.) BUYING OUT OR COMMUTATION 367—376

No mention of voluntary agreement—nor of buying out at a time subsequent to the Forest-Settlement. Compulsory under the orders of the F. S. O.—legal provisions—have respect to both the continuance of the enjoyment of the right and the safety of the Forest—Study of the forest—Case of aggregate rights being impossible to satisfy—Question of the easement being indispensable to holder—Not applicable to right of way, &c.—Sec. 24 of the Act disposes of these—Land—always cultivable required—need not be part of the Forest (as it is in Germany)—Value of land as a means of compensation—compared with money—Valuation of the right—First ascertain the value of one year's exercise—How this can be done in India—Next to capitalize this—Rate of interest (giving ‘number of years’ purchase’) considered—Arbitrary (but equitable and liberal) rule unavoidable. Valuation of the land (or other compensation) given as an equivalent—Yearly-produce value of land—Money in a lump sum always bad—Periodical payment and how it should be applied—Possibility of money payment in form of a remission of the Land Revenue on easement holder's cultivable holding.

Appendix A. Abstract of the German law as to definition, Regulation, and buying out of rights, with the method of valuation, and the official procedure 376—393

LECTURE XXIII.

THE LEGAL PROTECTION OF FORESTS AND THEIR PRODUCE IN TRANSIT.

(I.) OF FORESTS 394—405

Applicable to different classes of Forest—Indirect protection—Boundaries—Punishment for damage to marks—Regulation of easements already considered—Direct protection—preventive—remedial—Protection against fire—Information and aid legally requirable—Forest offences—under the Forest Act and under the I. P. Code—Forest Act offences—In Reserved Forests—In Protected Forests—In land not subject to formal Forest constitution—Special offences under the Forest Law regarding boundaries, and timber marks—reason for them.

LECTURE XXIV.

THE LEGAL PROTECTION OF FORESTS AND THEIR PRODUCE IN TRANSIT (continued).

(II.) TIMBER, &c., IN TRANSIT 406—422

General explanation—Subjects on which rules have to be made—Transit by Land—Transit by Water—Meaning of the control over rivers and their banks—Prevention of cutting up, concealing, and marking timber—Sawpits, prohibition of—Tampering with marks—Registration of property marks—Prohibition to carry marking tools—Liability of Government for loss of timber at depôts, &c., by accident—duty of certain persons to aid in preventing loss—Drift timber—Prima facie property of Government in, and its object—Salving—"Waif" timber—custom and rights regarding—Timber stations—procedure for ascertaining owner of timber—Not liable to seizure during process—Arbitration by forest Officers—Recovery of dues.

LECTURE XXV.

THE LEGAL PROTECTION OF FORESTS AND THEIR PRODUCE IN TRANSIT (concluded) 423—444

Use of the I. P. Code in Forest or timber cases—Relation of the Code to the Acts—Some cases where the Forest Act alone applies or has special provisions—Cases where either law applies—where the I. P. Code alone applies—The first already disposed of—Offences which can or which must be dealt with under the I. P. Code refer either directly to Forest (or timber in transit) or indirectly, i.e. to subjects connected with the Forest Administration and Forest Service—Theft and misappropriation—"Receiving"—Mischief—Criminal Trespass—Abstinent—Neglect or refusal to give aid or information to

	PAGE
Forest Officer—Offences indirectly connected with Forest administration—False evidence—Harbouring and concealing offenders—Breach of trust—Offences by Forest Officers considered under the head of "Service," Penalties for Forest Offences—Imprisonment and fine—Aggravated offences—Note on the Bavarian law on this subject—Special penalties—Suspension of rights—Payment of compensation—Confiscation—Restoration of Forest produce unlawfully obtained—Cattle trespass—Scale of fees in Forests—General provisions.
Appendix A. Abstract of the Chief Continental Laws on the subject of Fire Protection.	444
Appendix B. Note on the Civil Law of Trespass	447

LECTURE XXVI.

THE LEGAL ORGANIZATION OF THE FOREST SERVICE 449—466

The nature of Public Service in general—Appointments, how made—Duties and obligations under English Government largely depend on Contract rather than direct legislation—Duration of service—Appointment of Forest Officers and Organization of their Service—Explanation of the terms "a" or "any" Forest Officer; "the" Forest Officer; Officer "specially empowered."—Enrolment—Discipline—Uniform. Special obligations of Forest Officers—Not to trade or be interested in Forest leases, &c.—The Departmental Code on this subject—Penalty for vexatious arrest and seizure—General provisions of I. P. Code applicable—Bribery—indirect bribery—Public servants acting contrary to law, with criminal intent—Framing incorrect documents—Offences connected with official duty generally—False certificate—false charge with intent to injure—Breaches of duty not criminal—Criminal offence by officers, as private persons—their possible effect on official capacity. Commission to enquire into cases of misconduct.

LECTURE XXVII.

THE LEGAL ORGANIZATION OF THE FOREST SERVICE (continued). 467—481

The protection extended by Law to Forest Officers.—Liability becomes obnoxious through faithful discharge of duty—Civil and criminal action will not lie for acts done according to law—Explanation—Subordinate's duty if ordered to do what is illegal—Prosecution of Forest Officer when legal, requires sanction.—The Legal Powers of Forest Officers—Power of arrest—Seizure of illicit produce—Interposition to prevent offences—Power to regulate carrying or kindling fire—To demand aid—aid by Police ; aid of other Forest Officers—Use of force—Weapons, &c.—Power to “compound” offences in certain cases—Powers under sec. 71 of the Forest Act, explained—Note on French law of the statement of offences by procès verbal of Forest Officers—Comparison of this with the power under sec. 71—Conduct of prosecutions ; appearing and acting in Criminal Courts—Powers in connection with receipt of Forest revenue and public expenditure—Powers in connection with Government contracts for work, materials, &c.—Offences against the legal authority of Public Servants—“Contempt” of authority—Refusal to obey, or receive summons ; tearing down public notice ; refusal to take oath or affirmation ; or to answer ; or produce documents.—Giving false information with intent to cause injury, &c.—Resistance to seizure of property, or arrest of person—Refusal to give aid and information—Obstruction of officer in exercise of his duty—Threats of injury, &c.—Obstruction to sale lawfully ordered—Personating public servant—Offering bribe to public servant.

