

Editor's Acknowledgement

I am greatly indebted for the support and freedom Professor Upendra Baxi has given me in selecting and organising the theme and substance in this work. His critical scrutiny of each of these papers has not only helped the authors in improving their work but also in curtailing the extravaganza.

Mr. Anthony Botrall of the Ford Foundation, New Delhi, personally discussed many of these papers with the authors. Our appreciation for his suggestions and support is heartfelt.

These papers were discussed in a few internal, Delhi based, workshops and one national level workshop. Many of the suggestions made by the participants to these workshops have been incorporated in the papers. We express our gratitude to all the participants.

Without the liberal financial support from the Ford Foundation, and specially the encouragement from Mr. R. Sudarshan, Program Officer at the Foundation, this work would have been impossible. I shall personally remain indebted to him.

Finally, the real credit for the work goes to Prof. Alice Jacob, former Director of the Indian Law Institute, who forebore the idiosyncrasy of the administrative demands of the project.
