

FOREWORD

During the recent years, the Indian Law Institute has been carrying on studies and research in comparative law. It has already published a few monographs dealing with various subjects in this field. The present book deals with remedies for breach of contract in a few select countries in Asia. Some selection had to be made as it was not possible to cover all the countries in this vast continent.

The book, it is hoped, will be of great academic interest to comparative lawyers and of immense practical use to businessmen and their legal advisers. In the contributions, an overview of the contract law of the country concerned is first presented and is followed by a discussion of the remedies. This has been done with a view to presenting the contractual remedies in their proper perspective.

We are grateful to the several scholars who contributed valuable papers to the volume. Dr Joseph Minattur of the Institute had the task of contacting the contributors from various countries and getting the papers written. He has edited the present volume and seen it through the press. We are thankful to him.

S. N. JAIN
Director